FIFTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING.

ises to be one of large interest. The city of meeting is central. Binghamton is so situated that it is easily reached from New England, the West and South. The railroad associations offering reduced rates to different parts of the country will add interest to the meeting. Missionaries from the many fields will present the varied features of their work.

The report of the missionary opening in Porto Rico will be a new and important feature of this annual meeting. Rev. W. H. Ward, D.D., a member of the Executive Committee of the Association, and Rev. A. F. Beard, senior Secretary, have both visited Porto Rico, and the missionary and evangelistic work in that island has been projected with great care. Fields represented by this Association now cover a vast area, and include those attending this meeting cover the large portion of the country. The regular sessions of the convention are to be held in the handsome building occupied by the First Congregational Church. The Rally of the Young People's Societies on Wednesday evening, October 18th, is to gather in the Plymouth Church. In the pages of this Magazine we present the pictures of those well known in our denomination who occupy important positions in the administration of this Association. The Annual Sermon will be preached by Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, D.D., of Missouri.

many different races. Never in the history of the Association has there been gathered an annual meeting at which the field to be reported was more comprehensive, or the work larger or more important.

A company of Jubilee Singers from Fisk University will be present at the Annual Meeting. These young people, trained and cultivated along musical lines, still present the quaint and weird old plantation songs with the peculiar pathos of their race. The progress and possibilities of the race are impressed in the person of these refined and cultivated young people.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

BY REV. H. S. HATCH, MONSON, MASS.

There are some reasons why the work of the American Missionary Association among the despised races appeals with special force to young people.

It is the work which Jesus did among men. He did not neglect those in honorable positions. He was willing to bless anybody, but His identification was with the lowly. He was called the "Friend of Sinners." Now Jesus was a young man and the method of His work has an appeal to youth.

Again, this work calls for heroism, and youth is the recruiting ground for heroes. Not every one is aware of the disdain, sometimes the contempt, with which such work is regarded. To spend time and money upon Negroes and Chinamen with the hope of elevating them into sainthood and social power seems so ridiculous. All the more will the youth of our land take up the cause of these despised, these "little ones," and make that cause their own.

Let us also do it with no concealments, or equivocations, with but positive joy and gladness that thus we may enter into deeper fellowship with Him who saved others and pleased not Himself.

WANTED, A LITTLE COLOR-BLINDNESS.

BY REV. JAMES L. HILL, D.D., SALEM, MASS.

"I think that we can say of the colored boys," said President Lincoln to General Grant as they sat together reviewing the colored troops, "what a country fellow, who was an old-time Abolitionist, said when he saw Forrest personate Othello. Not knowing that Forrest was blacked up for the purpose, he said, 'Waal, laying aside all sectional prejudices and any partiality I may have for the race, I can't help thinking that the colored fellow held his own with any of them.'"

Mr. Lincoln spoke also for each attendant upon every Society of Endeavor Convention. If you are thinking of oratory, Bishop Arnett, Bishop Walters or Booker T. Washington can hold his own with any of them. Being just home from Detroit, we are unanimously of the opinion that a quartette from one of the A. M. A. schools can hold its own with any of them. And as for a consecration meeting open to general participation, our ebonized brothers and sisters can hold their own with any of them. So is it in gaining social recognition, any hotel that is too good for our colored trustees is not good enough for us. A Society is exactly adapted to colored people. It educates them religiously by association, by a process of leveling up.

Here is our responsibility. There may be among the young to-day a Booker T. Washington. "No illiterate people ever learned so fast." Africa opened her arms to receive the Christ-child when Herod sought His life. The ancestral, aristocratic estate of the vice-presidency of the Southern Confederacy, Mr. Alexander H. Stephens, at Marietta, Ga., passed into the possession of an ex-slave who repaired and renovated it, and could say "We are rising."

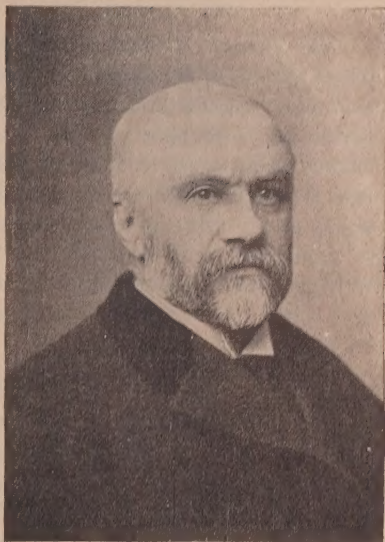

While Private Bosbyshell was the first Union man hit by a missile, he was struck broadside and was stunned, it was left to a colored servant to first shed blood in the war for the Union. Eighty thousand men of color gave their lives for the nation out of the one hundred and seventy-eight thousand who took the field with a fire of patriotic feeling.

We are always willing to get up into the chariot with the Ethiopian and ride when we have been afoot. It was a colored patriot, who, dying, having served his country at great cost to himself, took up the baby fingers of his youngest child and kissed them, and whispered, "This little hand will write." Let us see that it does, or may. If trained, too, in our industrial schools, it may yet hold its own with any of us.

The death of Mr. Charles L. Mead came with startling suddenness. He was a man of great vigor, physically, intellectually and morally. His strength and endurance seemed equal to his aggressive and persistent energy along many lines of important and prominent activity. He was known in business circles as a man of marked ability. In the church of which he was a member (Broadway Tabernacle, New York) he was for many years one of the deacons. His Christian life was characterized by great simplicity as well as depth of spiritual earnestness and conviction.

For nearly twenty-five years he had been a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, for a long time occupying the responsible position of chairman of that body. He was a man of comprehensive sympathies. He did not take in the interests of any single department, or the work among one race, at the sacrifice of other departments and other races. His mind was so broad and his view so comprehensive that he saw the relationship of the whole work of this Association to the interests of our country and the progress of the Kingdom of God. The work among the Negroes had his hearty and well-considered support. The developing work among the Highlanders also had in him an advocate and wise friend. The work among the Indians he saw in its true value and important significance. The missions among the Chinese and Japanese under the direction of this Association he saw had meanings for the nations from which they came across the ocean, and contained the prophecy of the spiritual regeneration of millions of people. The work in far-off Alaska so interested him that he took a journey there with members of his family to study the field and needs of the people, with the view of the wiser administration of the large responsibilities that fell upon him as a member of the Executive Committee. He will be greatly missed in the administration and deeply mourned by the missionaries in the fields.

A LETTER IN EARNEST.

Dear Friend: I take the pleasure to address you on school purposes. I heard about your school and I want to come if you can take me. I am called into the field of the ministry and have no education and I am poor boy and parents is poor and I will do any way that is right to get to come to school this winter. I want to work my way through and I can do most anything in the house and out the house and I will thank you for your help. This is a young ministry of God's work that is addressing you and I need help. Excuse bad writing spelling and give me an answer soon.

Yours truly, — — —

The above letter came from a mountain lad to a director of one of our schools among the Highlanders. It certainly breathes the spirit of desire for educational privileges not to be selfishly used, but for the higher purpose of true and honest service for others. It is a pity that many such touching appeals coming from Highland lads and lassies have to be denied on account of the lack of sufficient support for these interesting schools. What the mountainer need are academies planted in many destitute communities, which shall prepare the young men and women of this mountain region for the larger responsibilities of life. We commend this letter to any friends as typical of the needs of mountain boys, and as suggesting the possibility of helping in their Christian education.

DR. STRIEBY'S PLAN.

The following memoranda of articles and the names of those who should prepare them were found on Dr. Strieby's desk by the present editor:

1. "How can the North and South Co-operate in the Elevation of the Negro Race?" Rev. C. J. Ryder.
2. "The Economic Conditions and Hindrances of the Negro in the South," President Woodworth, of Tougaloo.
3. "How to Overcome Race Prejudice," Rev. J. E. Roy.
4. "Education of Negro Ministers," President J. E. Rankin.

In this issue of the magazine one of these articles appears. The subjects are of great importance and indicate how progressive Dr. Strieby was in his consideration of the great questions to which he had given so much of life and thought, and in the development of the magazine. We are sure that the readers of the magazine will be the more interested in these articles, knowing that they were planned by Dr. Strieby. The remaining articles will appear in future numbers of the magazine, and so Dr. Strieby's plans will be fully realized.

"HOW TO OVERCOME RACE PREJUDICE."

BY SECRETARY JOSEPH E. ROY.

It was characteristic of Dr. Strieby that, as editor, in outlining the subjects to be written upon in the future of the Magazine, he had struck upon the vital principles at issue, being a man that had understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do. Race prejudice cannot be overcome by argument. It is the case where one, "convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still." Such prejudice is mulish. It hears not to reason, nor can it be overcome by legal enactment. It is not amenable to the authority or the sanction of law. As there is a natural and praiseworthy love of one's own country, so there is a proper love of one's own race. When this regard is changed to hatred, it becomes sinful and should be overcome. And how may this be done?

Time and patience and bettering of acquaintance will be among the forces to overcome that evil. Dr. Powell used to tell of a home where Sojourner Truth was a guest. In that family there was a little girl who had never before seen a black person. Her racial aversion appeared so that she at first would have nothing to do with the old lady. But by her friendly arts the black woman won the child so that as the elder was leaving the home the younger, jumping into her lap and looking into her eyes, broke out, "Aunt, they say you's black, but you ain't." We had at the Metropolitan Hall in Chicago a celebration of the expunging of the black laws of Illinois from her statute books. John Wentworth, John Jones (colored), Lawyer Larned and myself were the speakers. Mr. Larned was a cultivated Boston attorney. He was an old Abolitionist. He said: "Having taken quarters at a London lodging-house I came down to breakfast to find a colored man sitting at the only table where there was room for me. I at once drew back, as though I would not go there. Then taking myself in hand, I said, 'Larned, you are an old Abolitionist; you ought to be ashamed of yourself; now go along and sit down by that man.' I did so. I found him a gentleman, a barrister, well educated and well traveled, and I sought his companionship while I remained in that city, and that was the end of my race prejudice."

The Irish in our country once aroused decided race antipathy; but now, since they have lived with us longer, we have to rate them quite highly, especially when compared with the immigrants who have been dumped upon our shores from the south of Europe. The people of our South are susceptible to such influences, and by and by they will yield to them. They often smile at their own inconsistency in showing such reverence for missionaries who have returned from Africa, and yet ostracising the cultivated people who come down from the North to do the same sort of work for the same sort of people, a work which they ought themselves to have done! On a train at the South I overheard two old-time slave-masters speaking of the pilfering habit of the ex-slaves, and saying, "It is taking that which belonged to them under the name of theft."

How overcome race prejudices? Appeal to conscience. Apply the Golden Rule. Take the term "altruism" in the Christian sense and set it to work. When Bishop Wilson in India would deal with the caste prejudice, he first brought up to the communion rail a brother of one caste and then one of another, and so on; and so sandwiching them he taught them to overcome the prejudice of caste.

In Dr. Strieby's statesmanlike series of papers and addresses, there is no one that is more incisive and pungent than that on "Caste in America." He says: "Caste prejudice is a sin. It injures those who cherish it. All prejudice is narrow—born of ignorance and hate. Caste prejudice, therefore, by narrowing the mind and embittering the heart, harms the American citizen both as a man and as a Christian. It hinders the progress of its victims. It creates race antagonism."

"Caste is a worse sin in America than in India. In practicing it the Hindu obeys his gods and his veda; the American dishonors his God and disobeys his Bible. The Hindu is a heathen and is degraded by caste; the American sends missionaries to convert him and to denounce his caste, and yet sustains caste at home. The Hindu is consistent in denying equal rights to all men; the American boasts that God made of one blood all nations, and that all men are free and equal, and yet tolerates caste."

THE REVIVAL AT THOMASVILLE, GA.

REV. T. M. NIXON.

For twelve days in April, Bethany Congregational Church had the greatest spiritual uplift it had ever known. For eight days during this time, Rev. James Wharton, the noted English evangelist, conducted a series of meetings with grand results. He is earnest, energetic and powerful.

The students and teachers of Allen Normal School, the Baptists and Methodists from the other churches of the city, and every member of Bethany Church prayerfully and heartily co-operated with Mr. Wharton and the pastor; and this accounts for the success of the meetings, for "where there is union there is strength."

In all, there were seventy-nine conversions. Many of the converts have gone to the other churches of the city, and a goodly portion have already united with Bethany and there are more to follow.

The fire that was kindled in the hearts of the people at Bethany has spread over all the city, so that since our meetings closed upwards of one hundred and fifty persons have been converted. One old gentleman, who lives twenty miles away, had two daughters in school here. Both of them were converted. He came up a few days afterward to see them. When they saw him they ran to meet him and flung their arms around his neck; and, weeping, they told him how great things the Lord had done for them. This joyful greeting is one that will be long remembered by all who saw it.

Bethany Church has doubled itself in membership and has increased its attendance threefold in the last twelve months.

SOUTHERN FIELD NOTES.

REV. G. W. MOORE.

At the close of a sermon by one of our missionaries, a gentleman greeted him with hearty thanks, saying how much he had been helped, and expressed his satisfaction in attending services where he heard the gospel and where the worship was simple. This gentleman proved to be a Southern man, a wholesale merchant and prominent citizen of Nashville. He is a member of the leading city church, but he felt the need of more simplicity of worship, and he longed for the plain gospel message, which he found at Fisk Memorial Chapel. He had quite a chat with our missionary; he spoke of his father, whom he knew as a bondman in the ante-bellum days, and rejoiced to see the renewed Negro and the changed condition. Another Southern man said to one of our professors that it was only their prejudice that kept them from enjoying the services and music at Fisk, which he said were the best in the city.

The Strieby memorial service at the First Congregational Church of Chattanooga, Tenn., was tender and impressive. Addresses were made in turn by Field Missionary Moore and the pastor, Rev. J. E. Smith. Mr. Hinton D. Alexander, one of the original Jubilee Singers, sang the Resurrection song: "You may bury me in the East, you may bury me in the West, but I'll hear the trumpet sound in that morning," and the congregation joined in singing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." Extracts were read from Secretary Ryder's and Dr. Ward's articles in the MISSIONARY magazine. Two young men from Grand View, Tenn., were at the service. A special tribute was also paid to our friend and benefactor, Rev. James Brand, D.D.

A PLANTATION SCHOOL, N. C.

BY REV. GEORGE W. MOORE.

The fourth anniversary of the Joseph K. Brick School at Enfield, N. C., was held May 28th-31st. The school at Enfield is beautifully located, four miles in the country, on the Atlantic coast line. As one crosses the bridge leading to the estate, a magnificent panorama of 1,129 acres of farm, forest, orchard and garden land stretches out before him.

Many changes have taken place since my last visit to Enfield, fifteen months ago. Several buildings have been added to the plant—a large, three-story, well-appointed dormitory for boys, with bath-rooms, reading-rooms and teachers' home; a two-story, brick workshop for the school of carpentry and blacksmithing; a large, well-equipped frame barn for the stock, teams and provisions. The large farm is under the direction of an experienced manager, is tilled by boys in the work department, which gives them intelligent ideas of farming and a means of support.

These work students work on the farm during the day and attend night school. An allowance is put to their credit for the work on the farm, which furnishes them the opportunity to attend day school the following year. The work in the school of carpentry and blacksmithing departments has made rapid progress, as seen by the fine exhibition of the handicraft of the students both in wood and iron. Good work is done both in the day school and night school and in the sewing department. The night school is composed largely of adult boys and girls who are very poor, and are willing to make any sacrifice for an education. One of these work students wrote to the pastor who inspired him to go to Enfield: "It is wonderful here; I would not give anything for my chance." Indeed, all the pupils at Enfield are poor country boys and girls, many of them coming to the school without a dollar, and begging a chance to work, that they may attend the school.

Enfield is in the midst of a large and needy country population. It is reaching a people who have never had a chance. Through the kind thought and generosity of Mrs. Joseph K. Brick, of Brooklyn, N. Y., this school has been planted in the back country of North Carolina as a memorial to her husband. It is doing a most beneficent work for that whole region. All the teachers of this institution are colored men and women, graduates from schools of the A. M. A., and principally from Fisk University.

The principal of the school is Prof. Thomas S. Inborden, who came to Fisk University with only one dollar and twenty-five cents to begin his education. His early struggles and poverty have fitted him for such a work as that at Enfield. He is assisted in the service by a devoted and well-trained corps of teachers. The closing exercises of the school were very interesting. There was a large attendance of visitors. People came many miles from the surrounding country in teams and on foot. It was an inspiring scene to see these boys and girls in this country school, and to witness the interest their parents and friends take in their education.

MAKING AN EFFORT TO STAND ALONE.

THOMAS J. CALLOWAY.

Those who have extended aid to Negro education for a quarter of a century and more are rightly asking the question: To what extent is the Negro trying to help himself? or, more properly, perhaps: Is he doing all that might reasonably be expected under the circumstances? My own observation is that while the race is not doing everywhere as much as it can do, nor, taken as a whole, as much as it ought to do, nevertheless there are hundreds of examples to prove that when the race is appealed to by an intelligent leadership in which it has full confidence, gratifying response is always forthcoming. Statistics of educational societies of the distinctly colored churches would furnish a surprise to many people who have supposed that an occasional Negro solicitor in the North meant a total dependence upon the charitable people of that section.

I do not propose, however, to discuss the whole South, but to relate briefly my own recent experience along the line of a Negro community making an effort to stand alone.

Going to Helena, Arkansas, January 1st of present year, to take charge of Helena Normal School, I found a community that is prosperous, the feeling between the races unusually pleasant, and the desire for a Christian education and a general moral improvement very strong. I felt, therefore, that my first duty was to give the people a chance to do what they were inclined towards their own education by contributing toward a fund for the repair and improvement of the school property. To this end, upon my arrival, I submitted to the local leaders, consisting of two Baptist preachers, one Methodist preacher, a practicing physician, the principal of public school, a merchant, and the editor of a paper, all colored, the proposition of providing certain repairs and supplies to the school in token of the appreciation of the people of the community for the work of the American Missionary Association. The proposition was accepted with enthusiasm, and several mass meetings were held at the schoolhouse and in the larger churches, the results of which are encouraging.

COLLEGE CAMPUS, TALLADEGA COLLEGE, ALA.

They closed the effort, temporarily, June 1st, and have succeeded in turning into the temporary treasury $100.00, besides securing the donations of a typewriter, wall clock and other useful articles. The enthusiasm seems to have only grown and a movement is planned to make a much larger effort in the next year. A portion of the money collected has been expended toward grading the school yard, a portion for relaying sidewalks, a portion for five dozen song books, twenty-five dollars toward the purchase of a piano and the remainder is kept as a nucleus for a fence fund another season.

TALLADEGA COLLEGE, ALA.

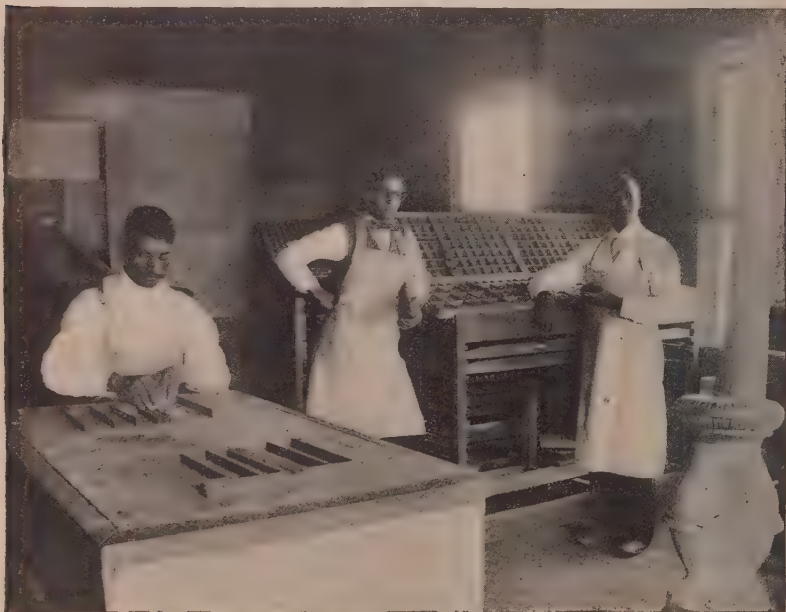

PROF. G. W. ANDREWS, D.D.

Two professional men of this city, father and son, were recently in conversation about the race troubles. The son said: "Father, have you noticed how little there is of it in this and adjoining counties?" "Yes," was the prompt reply. "Well, what do you suppose can be the reason?" The father thought a moment, and, as if a new idea had entered his mind, said: "I declare I believe it is the influence of that old college yonder on the hill." Thus almost unconsciously did the native Southerner bear truthful testimony to the influence and work of Talladega College. Recently one of our successful merchants, who had dealings with our pupils, said: "I have all confidence in your college boys. I never lose anything by them. They pay as they agree." A little less recently about twenty ladies from various Presbyterian churches of the state visited the college in a body, saying, with evident heart interest: "We want to see the school where Maria Fearing was educated." Miss Fearing with two others from the college were making such a record as missionaries at Luebo, Congo Free State, a mission supported in part by these visiting ladies, as to attract and greatly interest them. Unusual interest was expressed in the work of the college, one of them saying: "We used to be afraid of you, but this is no longer true. Indeed, we are trying to do some such work ourselves." The college provides each year a course of nine literary lectures, and the present year two of them were delivered by Southern men, one of them a professional lecturer, and both evidently enjoyed the audience, composed mostly of students who always seem to know how to get a great deal out of such occasions and how also to add something to them. By way of variety at these two lectures, they sang in a body, as an extra, "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Dixie," to the evident delight of the platform. The spirit of patriotism runs high this year because of our nearly a score of student soldiers in the Third Alabama, holding the highest offices in the gift of the regiment. Our Southern white friends also gladly embrace an opportunity to preach in the college chapel and address the Young Men's Christian Association.

These incidents show the prevailing sentiment of the best white people of the state regarding the college.

The interest in education is evidently on the increase in Alabama. An additional appropriation of $350,000 has recently been made for public free schools and the school year lengthened from three to four months. At the late Colored Teachers' Convention held in April, the State Superintendent of Education, in an address before that body, said: "I stand pledged to strive to build up the common school system of Alabama until the free public schools of the state are open for six months in the year, and then I want attendance thereon made compulsory." The recently enacted school law makes it quite difficult to obtain license to teach, as lists of examination questions are prepared and sent out by the State Board of Education, and examination papers from all parts of the state are returned to them for inspection, licenses to teach being issued from that same central authority. Thoroughness and uniformity are thus secured throughout the state. Low grade certificates will not be issued to the same person more than twice, thus compelling the teacher to study, and obtain the higher grade certificates or cease to teach. All this is very stimulating to the public school teacher and the aspiring youth of Alabama. Talladega College feels the impetus of such wise legislation, and was not without influence in securing it. An unusual number of young people are seeking to enter upon advanced courses of study. Much is being said in favor of the so-called higher education. At the recent State Convention the only paper ordered printed was one on this subject. Ringing addresses were made in its favor. Industrial education has its place, but graduates from the so-called industrial schools cannot lead the people, for, as one said, "They are just a little above the masses, and experience is showing that they won't do." The great advocates of industrial education send their own children to the colleges, and seek teachers from the same source for their industrial schools. Not ten, and probably not five, per cent. of all who graduate from them follow the trades they have learned, but unwisely seek to enter the learned professions, or wisely the college for five or six years of further study, previous to the professions. Talladega College believes in the industries. All its students work in them as subsidiary and as a part of their education, but not to learn the trades. To teach these is not our mission. Willing or unwilling, our environment as well as our equipment summons us to thorough normal, collegiate and theological work. The state looks to us along these lines. A dozen schools of lower grade are sending their graduates here for a few years of further study. We have the professors and teachers, the various courses of study well established, the library, buildings, public sentiment, a hundred and sixty graduates and hundreds of former pupils doing noble work in eighteen different states. We cannot even choose our course. No other school in the state can hope to do full collegiate and theological work for the colored people for many years to come. Other schools, doubtless, have as clear and loud a call to the lines of work pursued by them as we have to ours, but for ourselves the argument is abundant and the course is plain, and very great need there is for such work. The colored man in all the essential elements of his nature, and in his aspirations as a man, needs the collegiate and the university course of study in order to secure his fullest development. The black man is not so superior to the white man as to make it safe or wise for him to dispense with the kind of school the white man has found indispensable to himself. The American Missionary Association was unspeakably wise in founding for him the college; its work in this respect was no less than the thought of God. To deny the college to the black man would hopelessly cripple the race, and this would be a crime against Christian civilization. After nearly thirty years of service in this great mission field, so full of hope and rich rewards, my heart sings with unwonted joy: "Praise God for the Christian college."

CARPENTER CLASS AT WORK.

Such in general is the spirit of Talladega College at the present time.

As a help to the college, and as preparing the way for the advanced courses of study, and in some measure fitting for the plain, practical duties of life, we have at Talladega a farm of three hundred acres, a beautiful model barn, a shop for the wood-working industries, a printing room, a laundry, also cooking, nursing, sewing and general work departments; so that the whole school at certain hours of the day is a hive of industry. Thus the students become self-reliant, industrious, and in the end scholarly—in short, roundly educated men and women. The college would maintain and perfect these industries; but, on the other hand, the current of thought and the spirit of the institution are strongly in favor of advanced courses of study. Pupils who come here from lower grade schools soon fall into line. Just now a graduate from a good school where the industries are foremost said to me: "I came here to study the Bible, and become a preacher, but I now see that I need the full college and theological courses, and that I can get them at Talladega, and I want you to enter me for these courses." It is felt here that this is the way of hope for any people, as all history shows. To stop short of collegiate and professional courses is to choose an inferior place.

The 572 pupils of the college enrolled the present year come from ten states. Twenty-four instructors and workers have been in commission, using fifteen buildings, large and small, in all departments. Throughout the institution there has been a fine spirit of loyalty to the work and aims of the college. To speak of these things in full, and of our graduates and former pupils, would require long articles. The religious work is always kept well to the front. We live in an atmosphere of hard work, extreme economy, and of glorious hope through Christ our Lord.

FLAG-RAISING.

A movement was inaugurated some months ago to secure from Grand Army Posts of the North flags for the schools of the American Missionary Association in the South and West which did not have them. The effort has been very successful, as the Grand Army Posts have responded generously and with patriotic enthusiasm. This was only to be expected when the patriotism of the membership of this organization is so well known. The following letter, written by Principal G. A. Woodard, from Wilmington, N. C., gives briefly the story of the raising of the flag over Gregory Normal Institute, and will be read with interest:

"I want to tell you of our flag-raising. It took place on the afternoon of the 23d. Fully one thousand persons were present to see 'Old Glory' flung to the breeze. One hundred and twenty square feet of bunting floated proudly over our schoolhouse. The exercises were interesting. They consisted of recitations, the singing of patriotic songs, and some ringing speeches. We consider the affair a very successful one and the spirit of patriotism greatly increased. We have everything paid for except less than three dollars, that I expect from one of the posts. Our flag-staff stands thirty-five feet above the roof."

TOUGALOO UNIVERSITY, MISS.

PRESIDENT F. G. WOODWORTH, D.D.

Tougaloo is unique among the higher schools of the Association in its location. Fisk, Talladega, Straight, Tillotson, are located in large towns or cities—Tougaloo is in the country. Jackson, the State capital and the nearest town, is seven miles away. At Tougaloo there is not even a village; a railroad station, post-office, store, two or three small houses, are all that one finds on alighting from the MANSION AND BALLARD HALL, TOUGALOO, MISS.

Illinois Central train. Three-quarters of a mile away, hidden from the railroad by the woods, are the dozen buildings of the University. These are most admirably located. They face a campus having a fine growth of water and post oaks, with cedars and other trees intermingled, and back of them is a fine grove, of one hundred acres, of hardwood trees. Back of the buildings are broad stretches of cultivated land, orchards, grazing lands, with here and there fine clumps of oaks and willows, long lines of woods closing in the horizon in most directions. For beauty, healthfulness and desirableness of location, Tougaloo is unsurpassed.

In the country, in a State made up mostly of plantations, having few large towns or cities, in the very heart of the Black Belt, Tougalooo draws its students mainly from the plantations. Mississippi furnishes most of them, but Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Alabama and Texas are usually represented. Not more than one other of the great schools of the South touches so closely the great plantation population, the population most ignorant, most needy, most important, most hopeful. In the uplifting to character and religious education of the young men and women from the plantations lies the chief hope of the Negro race.

In such a location, with its few outside distractions, Tougaloo has opportunity for its large and influential work. It usually has over two hundred boarding students. Fisk alone of the Association schools has so large a boarding department.

The pictures which accompany this sketch give an idea of some of the principal buildings at Tougaloo. The mansion, the original building on the plantation when bought by the Association, is the "administration building." In it the president and treasurer have their offices and their homes. The library and recitation rooms are also in it. Ballard building, shown in the same picture, accommodates the grammar school, and contains also the chapel—a room too small for the needs of the institution.

Strieby Hall is the boys' dormitory, and contains also the rooms of the dean and teachers, and part of the recitation rooms of the academy and college. The academy courses fit for general life and for college, and have running through all the four years carefully arranged pedagogical work, so that the normal feature is fully recognized. College work was begun in 1897 and has been very successful. It is expected to develop constantly. No other similar school in the State provides thorough college training, and the demand grows, though the number fit will be small. Seven have been thus far in the college course.

Beard Hall, dedicated May 25, 1899, is the girls' new dormitory, built to replace one destroyed by fire. It is a very commodious and well-equipped building. Each of its fifty-eight bedrooms bears the name of the donor whose generosity made possible its furnishing.

BERKSHIRE COTTAGE, TOUGALOO, MISS.

Berkshire Cottage is the model home and girls' industrial building. Here have been taught cookery, needlework, millinery and practical housekeeping. It was one of the first "model home" buildings to be erected. To it was transferred the work of practical housekeeping.

begun at Tougaloo a dozen years ago, and for a long time carried on in cramped quarters.

The pictures of the shop and of the courses in wood, iron and steel, give a little idea of the extent and thoroughness of the manual training work. The courses are those which have been actually carried out this year, and they have been based chiefly on those of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, from which the instructors in those branches came. The object is not so much production as it is the training of eye and hand as part of the education of the white man. Accurate drawing from blue prints made at the school precedes every piece of work, and the work is all carefully marked on its conformity to drawings and specifications. The finished specimens of cabinet work, Morris chairs, desks, steel and iron tools, etc., were greatly admired at commencement time.

The manual training for boys and girls has been greatly aided by the generosity of the Slater Fund. It is expected that considerable additions will soon be made to the equipment, an additional grant for this purpose having been made. The building put up as an "emergency building" after the fire, was planned for and will make an excellent shop for the drawing and wood work. A new building for iron work is planned, and machine work is soon to be added.

BARN AND HERD.

Industrial work has been in progress at Tougaloo for two decades. It was one of the earliest schools to provide for it, and it has had continuous development. Probably no other school of its kind has so thoroughly co-ordinated it with its regular school work.

The pictures of the barn and cattle suggest the agricultural features of the school. The school has about six hundred acres of land, two hundred of which is under cultivation. On this are raised staple crops for home consumption, corn, oats, sweet potatoes, etc. Some sugar cane is raised and molasses made. Only a small quantity of cotton is raised, enough to show the benefit of intensive cultivation. It has been demonstrated here that instead of one-third of a bale of cotton to the acre, two to three bales can be raised. Berries, fruit, vegetables are raised for home use and for market—in Jackson and in Chicago. About five hundred peach trees are now in bearing, and as many more will be in two years. The work on plantation and garden is done by students, under direction of foremen trained in the school. About one hundred head of cattle are kept, and an equal number of swine, all of them of good breeds. The meat, milk, vegetables, etc., for the boarding department of over two hundred are raised on the place. The value of the practical knowledge of good cattle, truck-farming, intensive methods of agriculture gained is very great.

Brief mention can only be made of the Hand Primary and Kindergarten School for the day pupils; the musical department, with its most thorough work; the nurse-training department and the preacher-training. All of these have been for some time thoroughly successful.

Tougaloo is a thoroughly religious school. Christian character is the aim of all its work. Rarely have any been graduated from the school who are not Christians, and its graduates have done good Christian work. The record of some of them is a most noble one.

The general feeling of the better element of the people, white and colored, is heartily favorable to the school. At the commencement this year the chief address was given by the Hon. J. L. Power, Secretary of State of Mississippi, a most cordial friend of the school. In a brief address that followed, the editor of the leading Democratic paper of the State said in substance, that though he had all his life been prejudiced against the education of the Negro, his observation of the work done at Tougaloo had completely changed his opinion.

"The excitement attendant upon the last days of the school here at Oahe began as one team after another was seen driving up the valley and one tent after another was raised. 'My mother come, my father come,' were exclamations of delight heard on every side. After rehearsal in the chapel nearly the whole school scattered among the people in the camp where they met their friends. On Sabbath the people from the camp gathered with the children of the school in the service at the chapel. In the evening Mr. Riggs gave a last talk to the pupils and Mrs. Riggs scattered among them little booklets in English and Dakota, which they received with much pleasure.

"The women held their yearly meeting which was lengthy but interesting. Eight long hymns were sung and seven women made their remarks. In the evening the pupils in music entertained their people most delightfully, and at the same time showed their proficiency in this important department of child training.

"The school exercises in the chapel lasted about an hour, every pupil taking some part and doing so creditably. The work in domestic industry, accomplished by both girls and boys, gave evidence of this important line of instruction. After the exercises, each pupil, gathering together the bag or bundle of clothing and bread for the journey, bidding their teachers good-bye, started for their prairie homes."

BIG CREEK SEMINARY TENN.

MISS KATE C. LA GRANGE.

If you should visit Big Creek Gap, you would leave Cincinnati at 8 A. M., and arrive at Jellico, Tenn., at 6 P. M. Jellico is a railroad center twenty miles from the Gap. There you will have to remain for the night. In the morning early, just as the sun begins to peep over the hills, you will take your way up the steep grades and through five dark tunnels to La Follette Junction.

La Follette Railway is only two years old. Upon this road you would come to the Gap, so grand in its stately beauty. If you should like to visit the Big Creek Gap Seminary, you will have to stop at Hunter's Branch Station. This is only one-half mile from the school. All our students get off here. There have been so many this year and so much baggage that the general passenger agent has built a large platform for our use. How queer it would seem to one who had never seen the hills. As you drive over it, you would hold on to the sides of the carriage in a savage manner, and say: "Where are you going?" One gentleman who visited us said: "Why did you choose God's cast-off acre for a school?" We answered him that it was by no means "God's cast-off acre," and, although our corn crops were not always the best, we were tilling a character of soil that yielded better results than the stony earth around our buildings.

GEO. HUNTER, STUDENT SOLDIER.

In a funny old building the first teacher boarded, and, oh, how home-sick she was, and, although the people showed her every kindness, she discontinued her work. Our mountain people long to have a knowledge of the great world outside. One year we wrote to the American Missionary Association for aid, saying we must have a school building; we must have a place for the teachers to live.

The Association at that time was struggling with debt, and said, "What can we do; we are powerless to help." Our mountain people said, "We are poor, but we will do what we can." There was a meeting called, and fathers and sons discussed the matter. All denominations were represented. Two little girls said: "Papa, we can't work, but we can give what money grandpa in Kentucky gave us for new dresses and hats." Lumber, shingles and nails were given.

We can't affirm we have a real industrial department, but we can affirm that our work here has been done by mountain fathers and their sons, who have left the plow standing on the stony hillside—the plow which turned the thin soil which gave to them their daily bread—and worked during the summer months (our school vacation) that we might have a school building.

When the time came that the teachers needed a home, again an effort was made to make such a home, and the boarding hall now used for the boys was erected. Its history while being erected was painful in one respect, but only too true. One gentleman sold everything he possessed and put it into a form so it could purchase lumber. For one year there was a life and death struggle, and we all feared our boarding hall would go for debt; but a gentleman, who owns much land in this district, saved it, and we have been quite happy ever since.

The girls raised a protest that there was no place for them. One young woman, who is now in the mountains helping her brother on the farm, said the boys have more of a chance than the girls. Last year a boarding hall was erected for girls, and we have had more to apply for entrance than could possibly be admitted.

It is very hard to say "No," but we have no room yet after all this struggle. We fought with debt, with privations, but we have been very happy because there were results. There are no people who admit of training as our mountain boys and girls. We do not need to inspire them with ambition because they are very ambitious, and they are talented. Now, you will certainly smile when I say that the future poets and writers of this rugged country will rival those of dear, old New England.

In speaking of ambition to an old mountain man one day, he remarked: "Yes, my boys are mighty ambitious. Why, I've known that fellow (his son) to clean out ten men." As

GEO. RUTHERFORD, STUDENT SOLDIER

I looked at the boy I did not doubt it; but even that kind of ambition we have found to be not of an ignoble sort. There was a certain grandeur about some of those stalwart fellows as they marched out at their country's call last year. I will send you pictures of five of our schoolboy soldiers.

The problem of our American Highlanders is not the complex problem of a race question. No people are so truly American—so patriotic. In a place not far from this locality we have a section called South ————. It is shut in and much dreaded by officers of the law because the people who moonshine whiskey protect their business.

A few weeks ago a lady and her sister visited these people, walking many miles across the mountains in order to reach them. They were treated with the utmost courtesy. The father in one home offered them moonshine whiskey, insisting on their tasting of it, affirming, as he did so, that they gave it to their children each morning, and that it never had been a profit to the government, although he had made a plenty of it. They asked the ladies to stay a month and visit all the people. Much has been written upon the dialect of the people, but I have found that even in a locality like the above-mentioned one does not find this true.

Expressions are local, just as with all sections. For instance, our mountain people say "get shut of it" for "get rid of it"; "I reckon" for "I guess," "lift" or "rest your hat" for "remove your hat," "where is it at?" for "where is it?" "Diked up" for "well dressed," "It is a sight in the world" for "something terrible." But we have local expressions in my home state, New York. These are not the Coveites of whom Miss Elliot has written. In a place a little over twenty miles from a railroad center we find a people who have never even seen a railroad, or in any way come in touch with the outside world so as to cause a change of ideas. This locality was visited by an English gentlewoman whose name is well-known in Boston and who is at present a literary figure in all the East. She visited our school only a few weeks ago. I asked her what she thought, and she said: "No people are so purely American but of English descent. I discover so many of the old English expressions. I find no peculiar race, only the descendants of the Ledgers, of whom Conan Doyle wrote in 'Micah Clark.' They sadly need educating, but I must confess that I find an innate refinement; and the names suggest so strongly the Scotch-Irish."

Our sisters—and they need our help—our brothers—and the call comes to each of us—shall the work of the American Missionary Association be broadened for the education of these?

One mother said: "My chance has been so poor, but I shall work to have my children educated." Her boy graduated this year, and is to begin Greek during the coming year and finish the prescribed Latin to enter a theological seminary. I want to ask those dear, Christian people in Holyoke, Mass., who gave that boy a scholarship—if it pays to invest in humanity.

TEACHERS AND PUPILS.

GRANDVIEW NORMAL INSTITUTE, TENN.

PROF. H. L. HOYT.

RECITATION HALL, GRANDVIEW INSTITUTE, TENN.

On the summit of Walden's Ridge, at the eastern extremity of the Cumberland Plateau, is situated the little hamlet of Grandview. The village consists of a store, post-office, two churches, a large and imposing school building, a girls' dormitory, and, perhaps, thirty dwelling houses.

The main street winds along the bluff nearly two miles, and for the greater part of the distance overlooks the beautiful valley of the Tennessee. Walden's Ridge is 1,800 feet above the sea and about 800 feet above the valley. From almost every point along this ridge the view is one of surpassing loveliness.

Looking off to the south, the view extends across the valley and over the heavy ranges of hills until, at a distance of from seventy-five to one hundred miles, the vision rests on the clear outline of the Unaka, or Great Smokey mountains.

The Tennessee River in the somewhat distant foreground, like a silver thread, winds its way among the hills and across the fertile plantations of the valley. Standing upon this ridge in the early morning, with the dense white mists rolling over the valley, one often seems to be looking out upon a billowy, surging, noiseless sea, and, as the vapory flood rolls up from the south, great waves dash against the bluff and are hurled back, while another and another tidal wave surges up, lashing the cliffs, until the fog rises to the summit, and rolls over the face of the plateau. To the westward, beyond the foreground of dark forests sharply serrated against the sky, are seen the bold forms of the Cumberland mountains.

The village is made up almost wholly of people who have come from the Northern states seeking health. The society thus formed, for intelligence and moral worth, will compare favorably with any New England village.

Outside of this hamlet are to be found the real mountaineers, the most of them living in log houses scattered here and there over the plateau, often almost hidden in the woods.

Farming constitutes their only means for a livelihood, and, as the soil is generally quite poor and thin and markets are remote, the struggle with poverty seems to be an irrepressible one.

The center of interest and of influence in the town is the Normal Institute, a school for both sexes, founded in 1884 by the American Missionary Association.

For fifteen years this school has stood on the Cumberland Plateau, radiating knowledge and moral influence to an ever-widening circle. It is not in mathematics to measure the noble work accomplished by the American Missionary Association in this field. Already there are many young men and women, who received their education in this school, now giving glad testimony in word and work to their appreciation of the opportunity thus afforded them.

A young man, who for a number of years was a student in this school, now himself doing excellent work as a teacher, writes thus: "I was eighteen years old when Grandview Normal Institute opened her hospitable doors to me. I had never been ten miles from home, had never been to school more than six weeks in any one year, could just read a little in words of one syllable. My mind was in the bondage of ignorance and superstition; there was absolutely no intellectual or moral outlook. I shall thank God through all eternity for the American Missionary Association and the Grandview School."

Another young man, now approaching the completion of his course, says: "I was in the deep, dark pit of ignorance; the Grandview Normal Institute has lifted me out, and placed me where I can see something of what the world is and what life means. I can never repay the American Missionary Association for what it has done for me."

A young lady, now in the midst of the course, thus testifies: "I have attended the Grandview Normal Institute twenty-three months, and I would not exchange what I have learned and the blessings which have come to me here for the riches of the world."

Such testimonies might be multiplied indefinitely. Our school is the center of a large class of very poor people. If the children and youth now growing up in these mountains are ever to be able to help themselves, help must first come to them from outside. That the young people are eager for an education is evident not only from the number of pupils now in our school, but also from the appeals that are being constantly made for an opportunity to enter the school.

Some of these appeals are quite pathetic and some are expressed in a very funny way. Early in the winter I received the following appeal from a young girl:

"Mr. perfereser i reckon you don't know who i be but i hav hern of you and i lik ter go ter skool i hev ben 15 yere ole in september fer 4 yere i haint git ter go ter skool i reckon i kin lern rite smart if i kin only git ter go mebbe you think hit strange i haint go ter skool fer 4 yere but mam hev ben sick and the work hev ter be i hern thet in you uns skool sum work thar away i lowd you mount let me work sum if you knowd how poor we uns is i reckon you uns dont know how poor we uns is pap lowd he mount let you uns hev sum swet taters nex sumer if they growd."

In 1885 the Congregational Church of Grandview was organized, and since that time the church and school have gone hand in hand. On February 24th, 1896, the school building, including the boys' dormitory, was destroyed by fire.

The church was immediately opened, furnished with desks, and for three years the church building served the double purpose of a place of worship and a schoolhouse.

Three years from the destruction of the old building, on the anniversary week, we took possession of the new building. This is a large, substantial, two-story building, well adapted for school purposes. On the first floor is located the primary room, 25 by 40, well-lighted and pleasant, two large recitation rooms, the principal's office and janitor's room. On the second floor we have a fine assembly room, 40 by 60, and two recitation rooms. A wide hall runs through the entire length of the building.

Our new building, is not yet fully completed and is but poorly furnished. The gifts, however, already received for the purpose of completing and furnishing the house lead us confidently to expect that our friends, having begun so good a work, will not leave it unfinished.

A number of people, with large families, have made arrangements to move into Grandview before another school year opens, in order to have the advantages of the school. The prospect for a full school the coming year is, therefore, well assured.

COMMENCEMENT WEEK AT SANTEE.

Sunday was the beginning of the end, and it was fitting that on the last Sabbath morning we should celebrate the Lord's Supper before separating to our different homes.

The English service, held in the afternoon, was a Children's Song Service, and the hymns chosen for Children's Day were heartily and sweetly sung. The Christian Endeavorers had a public meeting in the evening. The topic considered was, "How shall we Spend our Vacation?" Excellent thoughts were voiced on the subject, which, if carried into acts, would work a great change in the homes of the people to which the children return. At any rate, it means much that they can express themselves as to what they ought to do.

The next public exercise came on Thursday afternoon, when we all gathered in the grove overlooking the road running through the mission, so that we might observe the field day sports. This is a new departure for Santee. It was entered into with zest by the boys, who acquitted themselves very creditably amid the applause of the spectators.

Thursday evening Dr. Riggs gave a public reception in Davis Hall. An enjoyable literary and musical exercise was given by the pupils. The cooking-school class in uniform executed a beautiful march, forming such figures as a five-pointed star, a cross and a chain with great exactness.

At the close of the evening, Dr. Riggs spoke of the idea and purpose of the Santee Normal Training School. It was begun thirty years ago, when the Indian people were unable to understand the meaning or the value of higher education. The success of the practical application of the idea of a higher education applied to the needs of every-day life is evidenced in the lives of those who have gone forth from the school, and in a movement on their part during the past year in organizing themselves that they may interest others to claim the benefits of the school for themselves and their children. There was a large attendance of former Santee pupils, many of whom now have children in this school.
